THE WRONG WAY

to buy drugs, is the cheap way. If medicine is to cure the sick, it must be the best and purest, and skill and experience are also necessary in the art of compounding physicians' prescriptions. We are registered pharmacists and we employ registered clerks in our prescription department. There's a very pointed moral to this true tale.
We simply give you our name and let you draw your own conclusions.

NON SINE PULVERE PALMA.

The class of 1902, Arlington high school, held its graduation exercises in the town hall Thursday evening.
Fifteen young men and women received the diplomas, which testify to both the quantity and the quality of the work done by each recipient, and four others were presented with certificates from special courses.

Graduates—Helen Morton Bridgman,
Marion Churchill, Louise Josephine Cooper, Raymond O. Grover, Julius Hackel, Harriet M. Jones, Wilbur M.
MacLean, Edwin Hatheway Mills, Louis
Alvan Moore, Therese Norton, Mary Louise Scannell, Leon Eames Smith, Ellen Elizabeth Sweeney, Arthur T.
Trowbridge, Constance Ethelwyn Yeames. Special students—Marion Foster, Frank Herbert Grey, Ruth Everett Richardson, Julia Therese Shean.

Quite early in the evening the "fortunate," who had received the coveted invitations began to assemble in the town hall, and when at last the hour of beginning came, the place was filled to the very last seat with the elite of the town. It was certainly one of the most sympathetic and appreciative audiences that ever came together in the hall, and it is equally certain that few classes have been more popular, judging from the generous and hearty applause.

Occupying the platform were Committeemen Tuttle and Robinson, Principal Holt, the members of the graduating class and a large chorus, about 70 voices in all, from the school. Following the announcement by Principal Holt, Rev. Mr. Gill opened the exercises with a brief prayer in appropriate and well chosen phrases. Thereafter, without further announcing, the following program was given, introduced by the excellent address of the class president, Miss Marion Churchill: Prayer,

Rev. Mr. Gill.
Address by Class President, Marion Churchill.

Presentation of Diplomas

The spirit of the whole evening was of a high tone, Dickens and his works being taken as the theme, which unified the program, and at the same time the smoothness with which it went off made a most favorable impression upon the audience. There was no number given which did not deserve commendation, and which did not receive the heartiest applause. Speaking in a general way of what really merits particular notice, both the literary work and the delivery of the recitations were excellent. The singing also, under the able leadership of Miss Heard, was remarkably fine, and Mr. Hackel's solo received its due reward in the demands for an encore made by the audience. Committeeman Tuttle made the presentation of diplomas in words significant as coming from one who has so long maintained an active interest in the school. After the close of the exercises, the hall was cleared and here was dancing until 1 o'clock.
Hardy furnishing the refreshments.

The members of the junior class, now seniors, prepared the stage decorations, which were in palms and cut flowers, with the class motto and a reproduction of the class pin effectively set forth. Eight of the juniors also acted as ushers, Misses Musgrove, Porter, Wilkins and Barker; and Messrs. Clifford Grey, George Grey, Buhlert and Cushman. Miss Perry was the pianist.

A. H. S. NOTES.

The Litchfield studio has turned out some excellent pictures for the seniors this year.

A large number of the graduating class will enter college. Raymond Graves and Louis Moore expect to enter Harvard, Arthur Trowbridge, Leon Smith and Wilbur MacLean will go to
M. I. T. Therese Norton, Marion Churchill and Helen Bridgman are taking entrance examinations for Radcliffe, although Misses Norton and Bridgman will probably enter elsewhere. Louise Cooper intends to go to Boston University and Nellie Sweeney and May Scannell will probably attend a normal school.

BELMONT HIGH SCHOOL.

The graduation exercises of the high school were held in the town hall last week Thursday evening. Fifteen received diplomas: Harry C. Stearns, president; Mabel E. Phillips, secretary; Harry H. Baldwin, Jr., Annie E.
Carey, Edgar B. Davis, Rachel Johnson,
Edward L. Lincoln, Emma G. Miller,
Olive H. Reed, Guenn H. Blair, Mary
E. Clark, Henry B. Hallowell, Leona
G. Langley, Laura M. Mackey and Marie A. Perault.

The following program was presented: "Distant Bells," girls' chorus; essay, "The Life and Work of Clara Barton," Guenn H. Blair; declamation, "Soldier of the Empire," Harry
C. Stearns; essay, "Travel Abroad," Mary E. Clark; essay, "Travel in America," Emma G. Miller; "The Village Blacksmith," school chorus; "Out on the Deep," boys' chorus; original translation, "Lan die Sonne in deinem Jahre aufgehen," Laura M. Mackey; essay, "Masks," Mabel E. Phillips; recitation, "The Swan Song," Leona G.
Langley; oration, "Be True Servants," Henry B. Hallowell; song, "Annie Lee," senior class.

The diplomas were presented by Rev. G. P. Gilman, chairman of the school committee, who said in part:

"It is naturally an impressive moment when we come to the end of a great and important work which has lasted through a long term of years and which has called for the full exercise of our powers. Such a moment is likely to be a cherished memory all the remaining years of our life, especially so if we have done our work faithfully and with success.

That you have done this work with a fair degree of faithfulness and success is implied in your presence before me at this time. On behalf of my fellow members of the school committee and of the citizens of the town of Belmont who have provided these splendid opportunities you have here enjoyed, I cordially congratulate you on this high honor you have attained.

I am about to present to you the formal testimonial of your success, and I trust that as long as you live it may remain one of your cherished trophies, as honorable as any you will ever gain.

For, make no mistake about it, it is a great and worthy success to graduate from the Belmont high-school. In thoroughness of drill, in wise adaptation of means and methods, in variety of resources, in breadth of knowledge, and in its general mental and moral uplift, the Belmont high school is probably better than the Harvard or Yale of 100 years ago.

In America we are trying to do what has never been done before in all the long history of the world—give every boy and girl a good education, an increasingly better and better education.
The world needs the service of all its educated men and women and that all its best men and women, whether educated in the public schools or in the sterner school of the world's work, should stand together and uphold and support the best things in thought and life.

By doing this faithfully and well you will best justify all this costly effort for your training into good citizenship and you will reflect high honor upon your alma mater, the Belmont high school.

As the graduates came forward severally to receive their diplomas they were received with rounds of applause.

At the beginning of the school year sides were chosen, the "reds" and the "blues," from the High School Literary and Debating society, to compete for points during the year in literary work and athletics. The "blues" were victorious with a score of 346 to the 344 of the "reds," and were presented with the prize flag by Mr. Gilman.

The program closed with the "Soldier's Chorus," from Gounod's "Faust."
The music was under the direction of Miss Barnes, instructor, with F. Otis Drayton, Jr., as pianist.

1902 RECEPTION.

The reception and dance of the senior class were held in the town hall Friday evening of last week. The gathering was quite largely attended by parents, friends, members of the other grades and the school committee, and presented a pretty scene upon the floor. The dancing lasted until midnight, to music furnished by members of the Belmont Orchestral club.

BACCALAUREATE SERMON.

The graduating class of the Arlington high school attended service in a body last Sunday at St. John's church in response to the rector's invitation. The church was filled, many of the teachers and a large number of parents and undergraduates also being present. Jules Hackett, a member of the class, played Handel's Largo as prelude, and Gounod's Sanctus as offertory.

The vested choir rendered the musical part of the service most effectively. Rev. James Yeames preached the baccalaureate, taking as his theme, "A House Built and Furnished." Dealing first with the building of the house the preacher showed that each is the architect and constructor of his own life. "By wisdom is an house builded." Selection of the site and preparation of the foundation are the first steps. Truth, as it was in Christ, is the only safe foundation. That life only is rightly conceived and planned which is founded and centered in God, and shaped and builded for eternity. Imperishable building materials also must be chosen; the principles of truth and goodness are granite; all else is but clay.

The furnishing of the house was next considered, how by wisdom, understanding and knowledge it may be well builded and filled with all precious and pleasant things. "So build and furnish the house of your life. None can do it for you. They may advise and help, and suggest plans and material, but you are the builder of the house, and you have to live in the house of character you build. Let your life face the sun. Do not be content to dwell in a low hut amid the damps of the cold, shadowed valley. Never live anywhere where heaven is lost to sight. Take yourselves at God's valuation. Take the Divine purpose as the plan of your life, and be not disobedient to the heavenly vision."

Mysterious Letters.

"Excuse me a minute, please," said the salesgirl. Then she turned to the clerk next to her and remarked: "T. A. I." After giving utterance to those mysterious words or rather letters, she resumed waiting on her customer. But the customer was interested. "Have you a secret society here?" she asked. "No," answered the girl, smiling. "I just wanted Alice to look at those two women opposite," and she pointed out two smartly gowned shoppers. "You heard me say, 'T. A. I.' Well, that means 'Take all in,' and you may be sure Alice'll do it." Inquiry developed the fact that "T. A. I." was a code signal with all the girls. —New York Sun.

Garnet Bullets.

Bullets made of precious stones are rarities in warfare. But during the fighting on the Kashmir frontier, when the British troops defeated the rebellious Hunzas, the natives used bullets of garnets encased in lead. The British preserved many as curiosities.

THE SURVIVOR OF ST. PIERRE.

Fiction Supplies Nothing So Remarkable as His Experience.

The sole survivor of the cataclysm at St. Pierre was a brutish negro, a felon, isolated in a cell beneath the sidewalk which might fittingly be called a dungeon, for only refractory prisoners were confined there. Raoul Sartout was the name of this jailbird. Fiction supplies nothing so remarkable as his experiences. Thirty thousand people, many living blameless lives with the love of man and the fear of God in their hearts, were reduced to calcined corpses by one blast from the furnace of Mont Pelee, and this dreg of humanity, this sink of depravity, this utterly worthless outcast was permitted to live. The best is often taken and the worst left, but here was a whole city full extinguished with mortal terror in their eyes—a swift judgment as of the destruction of the iniquitous—and the very refuse of that community left to enjoy the life of his senses. Priest, philanthropist, sister of charity, mother and child, untouched of evil stricken into hideous shapes of death, and a wretch whose presence was a pollution is spared to continue an ignoble existence!

Sartout could not have escaped if he had been a well-behaved prisoner. He was insubordinate and vicious; and a short time before the eruption it had become necessary to put him in the dungeon under the street. We can imagine that his food was thrown into him as if he were an animal, with a pious wish that he would beat his brains out against the walls of his cell. He has told the story of that terrible day in his rude patois. Probably it was drawn from him in broken syllables while he stared vacantly at his questioner. Sartout heard the rumble of Pelee; the thick walls of his hole in the earth shook violently, and he felt the scorching breath of the volcano invading his refuge. In the awful silence that followed he knew that death had come upon people in St. Pierre, and like one forgotten he beat upon the bars of his cage. An iron grating yielded to his blows and he stumbled into a larger cell. Hot cinders were sifting down from the street. The heat was so intense he was glad to run back and cover in the furthest corner of the cell he had left, and there he remained stupified with fear. Four days later the shrieks of the crazed negro were heard by a rescue party from the French cruiser Suchet, and almost dead from hunger, thirst and burns, he was released. His injuries are not mortal, and being young and robust, he will live many years, no doubt, to tell the story of the ordeal he survived. A Voltaire would find the case of Raoul Sartout an inspiring subject for his philosophy. In fiction only a Victor Hugo could do it justice.—New York Evening Sun.

Japanese Beds.

I had anticipated serious inconvenience in regard to sleeping, but I discovered that Japanese beds are not so bad, after all. Of course, this is a very nice hotel, and, on account of my friend, Mme. Sugimoto, whose family name is highly honored in Japan, we receive the best of attention, but my ideas of Japanese living are undergoing rapid changes.

Three mat-size (that is, four by six feet) cushions, each about six inches thick, were piled on the floor, the top one covered with coarse-woven but beautifully clean white linen. The covering is the same, only the cushion is lighter in weight. The pillow? A little white wooden rocking stool, four inches wide and eight inches long, holding in its hollow top a small silk roll, covered with soft, tough paper, also white. This paper is the pillow case, and is removed each morning.

As you stand and look at the bed, with its tinted silk and white, everything looks inviting and comfortable, but, however enthusiastic one may be to adopt Japanese customs, after the first half hour of experience he will cast aside that pretty, dainty, little rocking-chair pillow.

The wooden screens have been rolled out, converting the porches into long halls; the watchman whirls his rod of iron rings as he passes each hour; the street cries are growing fainter and mingling with dreams of home, and I sleepily murmur a "God bless all the dear ones" and "Oyasumi asobase" (good night).—Florence M. Wilson, in New York Mail and Express.

Welsh Indians in America.

Though public attention has lately been directed to Welsh settlers in America, the question lacks the great interest caused in the eighteenth century by the statement that a tribe of Welsh Indians had been discovered. In the seventeenth century John Josselyn, in his "Voyages to New England," mentioned that the customs of the inhabitants resembled those of ancient Britons, and Sir Thomas Herbert, another traveler of the same date, in his "Travels" gave Welsh words in use among these Indians. A century later reports from several traders and others were received of an Indian tribe that possessed manuscript, spoke Welsh and retained ceremonies of Christian worship. Among other information then published was the report of Captain Abraham Chaplain, of Kentucky, that his garrison near the Missouri had been visited by Indians who conversed in Welsh with some Welshmen in his company. Those Indians were thought to be descendants of a colony said to have been formed by Madoc, son of Owen Gwynedd, on his discovery of America in 1170.—London Chronicle.

Count Waldersee's Charger.

Among the pathetic stories concerning the latter days of famous chargers must be numbered that of the Australian thoroughbred which has carried Count Waldersee through the dangers and vicissitudes of the recent Chinese campaign. The other day, when his famous former master passed through Munich this horse also arrived in the same town, to be sold in its old age, to the highest bidder for hacks. It is only the favored few among humans who see as much of the world as this horse, which was born in Australia, sent to the middle empire to carry the head of the international army, and has now been sent on to Munich, where its temporary home is in the stables of the Officers' Horse Union. But surely Count Waldersee, or some lover of dumb things, will save the old warrior from sharing the sad fate of too many a faithful four-footed comrade-in-arms, which, when its strength is vanishing and its limbs stiffening, is obliged to pass its few remaining years in hard toil between the shafts instead of being accorded a well-earned rest.—Westminster Gazette.

ARLINGTON DIRECTORY, 1902.

The canvass is being made for a directory to be issued in September. It is to be a blue book and business directory as heretofore.

The blue book part gives the ladies as well as the men and will print "At home" day, summer residence and telephone numbers for subscribers.

The book will be bound in cloth and contain a map of Arlington and Belmont, corrected to date.

The leading merchants are quick to encourage a good institution and take considerable pride in their directory. The publisher reciprocates by issuing the best book he can produce in the mechanical part of it, as well as in its compilation.

WILD WOOD PARK.

The Boston and Lexington Electric Railroad company has come into possession of about fifty acres of woodland, pine and oak, at the Bedford line, which they have begun to improve and are rapidly transforming into one of the most beautiful parks along the route. A driven well will furnish fine, pure water, which, by electric power, will be forced to a tank at the highest point of the park to be distributed by gravity at all points where it will be needed.

Bears, deer, Belgian hares and peacocks form the nucleus of a prospective "Zoo." Walks are already laid out to all parts of the grove. A theater is now building, also a dancing pavilion and a restaurant. Seats, swings and other picnic paraphernalia will be added in due time. It is rumored that the park will be open July 4. However that may be when the park is perfected in all its appointments, the lover of nature will here find the nook he has been looking for, in which he may study plants, animals and people, or rest his mind and physical frame from all care and responsibility for the nonce. A step from the car to the park and from the park to the car eliminates all effort to reach the picnicer's mecca.

TO GET RID OF FLIES.

People in the country who are annoyed by flies should remember that clusters of the fragrant clover which grows abundantly by nearly every roadside, if hung in the room and left to dry and shed its faint fragrant perfume through the air, will drive away more flies than sticky saucers of molasses and other fly-traps and fly-papers can ever collect.—New York Tribune.

The Trolley Omnibus.

An electric trolley omnibus line is to be constructed between Bunnell, Gersau, Luzerne and Weggis, on the Lake of Lucerne. The motor omnibus will be fitted with pneumatic tires and will run on the high road without rails, deriving its power from an aerial electric cable. There is but on trolley omnibus line in existence at present. This is between Konigsberg, Halten and Kongsbrunn. The omnibuses on this line carry 21 persons each and have a speed of 12 kilometres. They can pass each other on the road, with the greatest ease.—London News.

State House Doings

This General Court, now just passing out of existence, has made more of a record for the measures it has killed than for those it has enacted. Page after page of the official bulletin may be scanned without disclosing a single measure of broad public importance; and to the negative glory of refusing to pass a cartload of bad bills the legislature has won a clear title. This is a praiseworthy situation for the legislature, of course, but it does not speak any too well for the petitioners, and it demonstrates that things would come to a pretty pass in Massachusetts if the general court were not, as a whole, clear-headed and conservative. Every year a resolve providing for a constitutional amendment authorizing a referendum to the people of enacted bills before the legislature is offered by the Socialist members and this year it was substituted, in the house, for the adverse report of the committee. What would happen if this amendment ever should be adopted may be inferred from the fact that the champions of this bill before the committee every year are the same who introduce a large proportion of the other measures which are so regularly defeated. In other words the petitioners for a statutory referendum are found to be the class which year after year knocks at the doors of the general court for the admission of measures which the majority sentiment of the people, as indicated by their representatives, disapproves.

To run hastily through the accomplishments of the dying general court, the most important of its productions has been, of course, the Boston subway bill, which will give to Boston a straight tunnel through the heart of the city for its elevated trains and make it possible to restore the surface cars to their natural home in the Tremont street subway. After years of contention peace has come out of this tangled situation and all interests were in agreement when the bill was reported to the committee having it in charge. It is expected that this tunnel, which it will take about three years to build, will be very deep and that over it, in seven or eight years, will be constructed a subway for the use of surface cars; the two to be connected by elevators.

In another direction the attitude of the legislature has been extremely important. This has been with respect to domestic corporations. It has at last been recognized that the Massachusetts corporation laws, excellent as they are in many respects, are too rigorous in some features and it is expected that as a result of legislative action this year they will be materially modified. The broadest move has been the appointment, under authority of the general court, of a commission consisting of ex-Attorney General Hosea M. Knowlton, Hon. Charles G. Washburn of Worcester and Frederick J. Stimson of Dedham, three of the finest minds in the commonwealth, to revise the laws relating to business corporations with a view of so broadening them that capital will be attracted to rather than driven away from this state. When the American Bell Telephone Company left Massachusetts some years ago, because the local laws were regarded as too drastic, taxes which would amount to more than a million dollars every year went with it—enough to pay the entire state tax—and since then the current of public opinion has been changed somewhat and the problem is how to keep great enterprises here and not to drive them away.

On its own account also the general court has eased up on the corporations. It has passed a general law authorizing the issue of preferred stock by corporations without recourse to the legislature. It has given the railroad commissioners more latitude in granting issues of stock and bonds to street railway companies, it has reduced the taxation of corporations owning vessels engaged in the foreign carrying trade to about that of individual owners of such vessels—a nominal amount—and it has permitted savings banks to invest in the bonds of certain street railway companies. It has authorized also the attorney general, the commissioner of corporations and the chairman of the savings bank commission to act as a commission to investigate the laws relating to trust companies—this as a substitute for a recommendation of the savings bank commissioners that a state banking law be enacted which would enable state banks to do a trust company business without going to the legislature for charters. The business outlook, in fact, as far as legislation relates to it, is very hopeful.

The new law enacted by the present general court is not voluminous, except in measures of local or limited application. The legislature refused to allow the system of compulsory vaccination to be curtailed, and, indeed, passed a bill requiring the state to supply vaccine lymph free, as it now does anti-toxin. Several physicians who were opposed to vaccination and exposed themselves to the disease caught it, and their experience did not help their cause. The legislature refused also to allow the Boston gas field to be opened up for legislative tinkering, to abolish capital punishment and to permit barbers in hotels to ply their trade on Sundays or bootblacks to "shine" after 11 a. m. on the Lord's day. It monkeyed with the liquor license system, however, to the extent of passing a bill authorizing local option in certain specified districts in the city of Boston—a substitute for ward option, which was found to be unworkable; and the politicians got hold of the measure and tacked on a referendum to the state election which is expected to give the republicans the new congressman from Boston next fall and to ensure the election of republicans in two doubtful senatorial districts. Notwithstanding his advice in his first inaugural message, that the liquor laws would better be left alone Governor Crane signed the bill, although it is doubtful if he would have done so had it not carried its peculiar referendum.

One of the largest of the new measures provides $5,000,000 for a continuation of the system of grade crossing abolition but with street railway companies included as parties to the cost thereof. The speed of automobiles is restricted to not exceeding ten miles in cities and closely crowded localities and to fifteen miles on the country highways. An attempt to regulate the smoke nuisance in Boston failed, as did also one by the same parties to rid the city of the services of William Doogue, who has charge of Boston Common and the Public Garden, and to place his department in charge of the park commissioners. The movement to recognize osteopathy as a new science of healing failed, but it is predicted that eventually it will succeed. The caucus and election laws were hardly touched, except by the passage of the Luce bill, described in these columns last week. The pressure upon every legislature to establish civil pension lists is very great, but it was resisted again this year. Resolves for statues to Benjamin F. Butler, Christopher Columbus, Roger Williams, John Hancock and possibly other worthies were defeated. The state refused to change its historical policy and thus permit selling for menhaden in Buzzard's Bay. The house substituted a bill requiring cats to be licensed and then killed it. An important local improvement authorized by the legislature is the dredging of Dorchester Bay to a depth of twelve feet, which will prove of great convenience to the fishing fraternity.

A bill which caused great excitement and finally was signed by the governor, after he had it recalled and amended, was that permitting the sale of soda, ice cream and candy upon the Lord's day. A year or two ago a strong and almost successful effort was made to legalize the playing of games like golf on Sunday. The legislature undoubtedly sympathized with the movement, but when it was pointed out that the more the matter was agitated the more likely the authorities would be to stop the Sunday games which now go on without warrant of law, the matter was not pushed. The legislature has voted to award medals of honor to the "minute men of '61" and also to authorize the erection of a memorial to the Pilgrims who landed at Provincetown before striking Plymouth. Following the example of other states which have made it successful, an old home week has been established, beginning the last Sunday in July. A law of some importance if it is enforced is one requiring the state board of health to publish in the newspapers the results of its analysis of impure food. The house refused to change the name of the town of Maynard to Assabet, its original appellation, and to set off East Foxboro as a separate town. The lawmakers took the pains to fix the weight of a barrel of sweet potatoes at 150 pounds and also authorized the appointment of women as weighers of coal. It also did many other things, but these are among the most noteworthy. The batch is small enough at best.

The story is now in circulation that Hon. Rufus A. Soule, president A. Soule, will soon announce his intention to return to the senate and that he will be a candidate again for president. What will happen to the campaign of Hon. George R. Jones of Melrose for that office is difficult to predict at this writing, but the likelihood is that if President Soule is re-elected from his district he will succeed himself in the chair.

The general drift in the Lieutenant-governorship field is toward Gen. Curtis Guild, Jr., of Boston.

SPOFFORD.

King and Hecar.

An amusing story of King Christian and an enterprising beggar is going the rounds in Copenhagen. The King takes habitually an early morning walk, accompanied by Prince Waldemar and his favorite dog.

Recently, during one of these walks, a ragged man, with all the typical cringing of a beggar approached him.

"Well," said the King, "what is it?" "Dare I ask your Majesty for your portrait as a memento?" said the beggar humbly.

Naturally the King was both surprised and pleased at this declaration of loyalty, but regretted that he did not carry his portraits about with him.

Pardon me, your Majesty," retorted the tramp, slyly, "if you will look in your purse you will probably find one."

The King, amused at this novel way of asking for alms, gave the man two crowns; but the police, to whom such smartness does not commend itself, have duly "marked" the man.—London Express.

WHY IS IT?

Why is it that the average reader and speaker cannot so enunciate as to make himself heard by the average audience? We are quite aware that we have written on this subject of faulty enunciation over and over again, and we expect to repeat ourselves on this same subject many times over in the future. We are forever boasting of our improved methods in teaching reading in the public schools, and yet we are graduating from the schools each year readers who are far inferior to those of a half century ago. This statement we make without fear of successful contradiction. The reader of today does little, other than mumble and swallow his voice. It isn't volume of voice that is so much wanting as it is clear, distinct enunciation. There isn't one platform speaker in ten who makes himself easily understood to those in the back seats. It was seldom or never that one lost a word that the late Rev. Dr. Kirke spoke from his pulpit. It was always a pleasure to listen to the late "Father Taylor," because every one so easily caught every syllable even, that he so clearly enunciated. Now don't all you elocutionists and teachers rise up at once and declare that we older people are "deaf as posts." We asked a boy of acute hearing and in his teens if he heard what the speaker said to say in her address one Sunday morning to the Sunday school children assembled in the church, and his reply was "I couldn't hear her." She was so lacking in both volume of voice and in distinct enunciation that but comparatively a few of her audience ever could have heard her. Now this frequent fault in the public speaker and reader should be somehow remedied, and we know of no better way of doing this than by insisting in our public schools that the girls and boys shall open their mouths. The fact is, the boys and girls do open their mouths until they are practically taught by the so-called elocutionist or other instructor to speak with partially closed lips. As a matter of fact, the boy and girl always read and speak so as to be easily heard before they get into the public schools, but the moment they become pupils then the brakes are applied according to rule, and right at this point the mumble begins.

DOES ADVERTISING PAY?

It is too late in the day to ask the above question seriously, for it is the testimony of all successful business men not only that advertising pays, but that it is a condition precedent to all business enterprises. The merchant or other who persists for an indefinite time in not advertising is making ready in a logical way to go out of business. The difference between the advertising merchant and the non-advertising merchant is the difference between the man who pulls off his coat and rolls up his sleeves and gets down to hard work and pushes his business, and the man who sits down and waits for business to come to him. "It is the difference," says the Jacksonville Metropolis, "between perseverance and sloth; it is the difference between energy and laziness; it is the difference between the man of today and the fossil who has notions that are a half-century old."

You look at the newspapers in any town and scan their advertisements—see who it is that advertises; what is advertised—and then you can readily understand something of the business life of that town. But why multiply words? Everybody knows that it pays to advertise, and that the newspapers are the best mediums.

The business men of Scottsdale, Pa., have formed an association against all fake advertising. Hereafter they will put their advertising money into the daily and weekly newspapers. Unanimously they have indorsed the newspaper as being the best medium of advertising, and the only one that proves satisfactory at all times.

VACCINATION NOTICE.

The attention of the citizens of Arlington is called to the fact that small-pox is now prevalent in the neighboring cities of Cambridge and Somerville. All persons who have not been vaccinated should give the matter their immediate attention. With the return of cold weather it is feared that an increase in the number of cases may occur.

By an early and prompt attention to this request, much suffering may be avoided.

Daniel Collins, employed at Stone's, was sick the first of the week.

B. S. Currier of Claremont avenue is to entertain a young men's club from Roxbury tonight.

Miss Harriet Rouse of East Berkshire, Vt., is visiting Miss Beth Flint of Hillside avenue. Robert Taylor of South Glastonbury, Conn., and John Hawes of Chicago have also been making a visit this week at Mr. Flint's.

A very pleasant evening was spent at Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Kendall's last Wednesday by a party of young folk. Music was in order, both vocal and instrumental.

Mrs. Torrey of Rockport, Mass., is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Haskell, of Claremont avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Moore and daughter, Vera, have left the Heights and gone to Boston.

Miss Shoemaker will spend Sunday with Miss Simpson of Claremont avenue.

The Ladies' Physiological institute, the oldest woman's organization in the United States, 54 years old, held its annual picnic at the Heights Thursday afternoon, being the guests of Mrs. Mac Bride.

The members of the Women's Press association of Pennsylvania, who have been attending the Press club meetings in Boston this week, will spend the afternoon today with Mrs. MacBride.

Miss Margaret Patterson left last week Thursday for New York, whence she sailed for Antwerp, to be gone during the summer months. She will spend the time in a few quiet villages, sketching and painting.

Jules White is with a surveying party for the summer months, working in the Adirondacks.

Philip Patterson and Harold Fay have been camping out the past week near Bedford on the shores of the Concord river.

Rev. Horatio Gray and sister of Boston are guests at the Robbins Spring hotel.

Thatcher Clark of Boston, whose parents reside at Mrs. Perkins' and who is himself well known to many at the Heights, received his Ph. D. from Harvard Wednesday.

The following pupils of the Locke school have not been absent during the past year: Grade 8, George Bacon, Florence Ingram, Carrie Nourse, Ethel Phillips; grade 7, Charlie Burrage, Harold Drew, Raymond Manley; grade 6, Penno Derby, Edward Schumacher; grade 5, Frank Wyle; grade 4, Grace Barr, Durant Currier, Katharine O'Donnell; grade 3, Margaret Lynch, Florence Davis, Roger Hadley, Archie Cox.

Agnes Ussher has been absent only one-half day, and Frank Wyle has not been absent for three years.

The eighth grade of the Locke school presented Miss Wentworth with a cast of Mercury Thursday.

Young Men's League Notes.

The Young Men's League met Tuesday evening at Walter Harris' Lowell place. It was the last regular meeting before vacation. It was voted to assess each member one dollar, to be paid within thirty days. The athletic committee of the league has decided to have a series of athletic events during the vacation. These will be held Tuesday and Saturday evenings at or near the Arlington Heights reservoir. There were three new members received at the last meeting.

George Irving made a trip to New York, participating in the century run given by the New York Journal, for which he received a very handsome sterling silver medal.

Henry Schumacher expects to go this week to New York on a two weeks' vacation.

NEW HIGH SCHOOL.

In a recent interview with the structure, now so well along, which is to be Lexington's high school building, an Enterprise man learned some few facts about the edifice which may prove of interest to the citizens of the town. In the first place, from an architectural view point, there are features which seem open to some criticism. As things are at present the main entrance facing Massachusetts avenue would seem scarcely imposing enough for a public building. The doorway, which should be double, is but single, and small in proportion. Possibly the steps and stonework which are to be put in will to some extent obviate this defect.

Within, so far as can be seen at present, there is little but praise to be said. On the first floor immediately at hand as one enters, there are offices for principal and superintendent. The large hall is to be commended. Five large and pleasant recitation rooms, well shaped, which is a great point in a school room, and with plenty of light, lead off. Ward robes and coat rooms are handsily placed, and on the second floor as well. Above there are six recitation rooms, even more pleasant and better lighted than those below. One chief characteristic of the whole building is the great amount of window space in its walls. On this floor will be the chemical and physical laboratories, but so far as could be seen there has been made no provision for an astronomical observatory, however small. In two small shafts, one at each end of the building, elevators will run from basement to second floor for the transportation of books, apparatus and other supplies from the storeroom in the basement up to the several floors.

Another flight of stairs leads to the third floor, where good use is made of the "attic" by transforming it into a neat auditorium, with stage and a dressing room on either side and with connecting passage behind. The lighting of this room also is excellent. But it seems a mistake to call it all, as open it would be much better acoustically and just as pleasing in appearance if not more so.

In the basement there will be installed two 65-horse power boilers, a 25-horse power engine, and a Sturtevant blower for the ventilating system. The plasterers are at work, having completed the first floor yesterday, all but the "hard finish." P. F. Dacey has this contract and will have laid on some 6,000 yards when the job is done. The wiring also is in process, under the charge of Cameron of Gloucester. He will string in the neighborhood of a mile and a half of copper wire, roughly speaking, 8000 feet. And upon the roof, Greene & Haley of Roxbury are proceeding to lay over 15,000 squares of slate, in each of which two nails must be driven. The whole work is in the hands of H. P. Cummings & Co., building contractors.

It is expected that the building will have cost when completed a little under $60,000, and that it will be ready for occupancy at about the time for the opening of school in the fall.

LEXINGTON LOCALS.

A meeting of the high school building committee was held in Cary hall Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett S. Emery and son are occupying Mr. Emery's father's house on Oakland street for the summer. They arrived Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Locke returned last week from an extended western trip.

Cards are out for the marriage of Miss Louisa M. Wooster to Charles E. Gaffney at the Hancock church the evening of July 9.

St. Brigid's parish is to give a lawn party in the not distant future. An enthusiastic meeting of parishioners was held Tuesday night in the basement of the church for the purpose of organization. It is an annual event and will be held on the church grounds. Committees were appointed.

Thomas Qualey and Mary Kirby will be married at the parochial residence by Father Fennessey tonight at 7.30.

The laying of the tile drain on Massachusetts avenue between Woburn street and the green is nearly completed.

Mrs. G. H. Roberts and daughters left Monday for Oakledge, Maine.

The following have been appointed special park police for the Lexington park, which is rapidly approaching completion: Michael H. Finch of Waltham, ticket agent; Quincy W. Benjamin and Albert W. Stone of Lexington, and Samuel R. Simpson.

W. V. Taylor will move into the portion of the Hunt building now occupied by the Independent the first of August.

P. F. Dacey, who is doing the plastering in the new high school building, is plastering two houses on Adams street for Freeman and Charles Doe. In addition, this busy man is plastering two other houses on Fletcher avenue, not to mention still others.

Hancock Church.
Regular services at 10.30 tomorrow morning with preaching by the pastor.

The special sermon that was to have been preached will be withheld on account of the postponement of the coronation of Edward VII.

WELCH—McNIFF.

Sarah McNiff of Arlington and John Welch of Lexington were married Wednesday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock in St. Bridget's church. Father Fennessey officiated. Katherine McNiff, sister of the bride was bridesmaid and the groom's brother, Peter Welch, was best man. The bride was dressed in white. Miss Nellie Kelley of Bedford sang. Miss Murray, also of Bedford, was organist. The couple will live on Woburn street.

Ball Game.

The trade clerks played a baseball game with a team from the L. and B. railway conductors. The game was loosely played, and at the end of the eighth inning the score was 29 to 6 in L. and B.'s favor. There will be another game in the near future, and the clerks say there will be a different story next time.

The following composed the Lexington team: W. Moxley, catcher; Low, pitcher; Keefe, first base; Robb, second base; Mitchie, third base; Burke, right field; Doe, c. f.; Bert Jackson, lf. For L. and B. Barrett, p.; Dec, catcher; Toomey, first; Daley, second; French ss.; Brown, third; Sawyer, right field; Kelley, cf.; Norton, lf.

Baptist Church.

A delegation from the Hancock church Christian Endeavor society, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Graves and Miss McKinnon, visited the Baptist society last Sunday evening.

Tomorrow morning the pastor's subject will be "The Battle for Mastery." Evening subject, "The Christian's Warfare."

Rev. F. A. Macdonald, Deacon C. P. Ashley and H. E. Tibbetts, superintendent of Sunday school, went as delegates to an ordination council held in the Watertown Baptist church, June 4.

EAST LEXINGTON.

The street widening is progressing rapidly. The drilling, blasting and digging are nearly done, the wall almost completed, the sewer laid, and the walks well along. A large force of men has been at work and their efforts, under the guidance of Contractor McGue's skill and experience are accountable for the good speed made. Report has it that the cars may be expected to be running on the double tracks by the end of about three weeks.

W. S. Cook's house opposite the East Lexington depot is left "high and dry" by the widening operation at present, but when the stone work is finished, the filling and grading done, and the two flights of steps, which are to lead up, completed the place should present a much better appearance.

Mrs. C. H. Buttrick and daughter of Philadelphia, are visiting at the home of Gorham Buttrick on Massachusetts avenue.

A good crowd attended the lawn party and festival given Wednesday evening by the Ladies' Aid of the Baptist society. The affair was held on the new Curve street grounds of the society, which were lit up by the enticing glow of Japanese lanterns strung about and over the tables. Strawberries, ice cream and cake, lemonade and candy formed but a part of the program. A hurdy-gurdy also was present. But the chiefest of the attractions was the Rebekah, who at the well drew forth the delicious lemonade, and the Gypsy who threaded the crowd with her basket of peanuts, in the persons of Miss Edith Sim and Miss Nellie Sim; Miss Emma Sim, Mrs. Page and Mrs. Torrey were the committee in charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Meek of Fern street have a little daughter.

Mrs. Bartlett Harrington spent Sunday at Hyde park.

Mr. and Mrs. Parker Curtis from Corinna, Me., have been visiting Mrs. Page for a few days.

Mrs. Butterfield was quite sick the first of the week.

Revs. F. A. Macdonald, G. W. Fuller and D. C. Easton were present at the lawn party Wednesday evening.

H. Malcolm Torrey gives special attention to hand-made shoes for driving horses.

If you want express matter promptly conveyed, and by gentlemanly carriers, go to W. F. Sim & Co.

Lucius A. Aupstin has a well-stocked line of choice groceries, fancy goods and Yankee notions for the trade.

The stores will be closed next Friday, July 4. They will be open Thursday afternoon and evening.

NEW INDUSTRY.

C. H. Hoffman of North Cambridge has recently taken the pumping station at East Lexington for a workshop. Shafting has been put in, benches set up and other preparations made, and it is expected soon to have the shop running full blast. Mr. Hoffman is interested in gasoline engines; he repairs, overhauls them and puts them in running order, and in addition he has ideas of his own which he is engaged in, so report has it, in working out. No machinery has as yet been installed in the shop, and no engine.

These will go in before long. Mr. Hoffman will probably spend some months in experiments along original lines, doing repair work besides, and later will manufacture, so it is said.

INSTRUCTIONS.

Before giving an alarm be sure a fire exists.
Give the alarm at the nearest box.
Pull the hook way down, only once, and let go.
Never give an alarm for a fire seen at a distance.
Wait at the box, if possible, and direct the firemen to the fire.

Never give a second alarm for the same fire; all second alarms are given by the engineers or other persons in authority.
Never give an alarm for a brush fire unless buildings are in danger; but inform the engineers and they will take action to extinguish it.

Citizens are requested to inform themselves as to the location of keys. Signs on the boxes will give the necessary information.

CAUTION TO PERSONS HAVING KEYS.

Never open boxes except to give an alarm.
You cannot remove your key until an engineer releases it, and it will then be returned to you.

Never allow the key out of your possession except to some responsible party, for the purpose of giving an alarm, and then see that it is returned to you.

You remove from your place of residence or business, return the key to the chief engineer.

A PERENNIAL CONTEST

AN ANT WAR WHICH HAS LASTED FIFTEEN YEARS.

The Field of Battle is a Cemetery in Pennsylvania—Black Ants Make Raids Upon a Colony of Red Ants For Slaves—The Plan of Campaign.

In the little cemetery at the St. Vincent Monastery, Latrobe, Westmoreland County, Pa., over the peaceful graves of the departed Benedictine monks, there has for fifteen years waged a curious war, the outcome of which is watched with interest by the fathers of the institution, one of whom, at least, Father Jerome, is known widely as an entomologist of repute, being at present engaged in identifying entomologists for the museum of the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh, several new species which he has discovered being named after him. The war in question is a perennial contest waged between two colonies of ants. In the cemetery proper there is a colony of "slave-taking ants," the boundaries of whose home are definitely marked near the borders of the burial ground. Just over the hill from this is a colony of the common red ants of large size, and between these two communities, or formicaria, for a decade and a half the battles have been frequent and furious. As a natural consequence the red ants being constantly depleted of their "neuters," or workers, are becoming less and less numerous, while the black ants, living in luxury and ease, are waxing more powerful in numbers each year. The outcome will probably be that in the end the slave-taking ants will exterminate the red ants, when the former will be compelled to move elsewhere for serfs.

Exhaustive study, under the microscope, has been made of the two colonies and their bellicose relations by Father Jerome and other priests at the monastery. The black ants have constructed, with the help of their serfs, immense galleries in the cemetery, which are constantly being enlarged by the additions of new colonies sent out from the mother house and the extending of these by increasing population.

To begin with, there are three kinds of ants in the black nest: the males, females and the neuters, the latter being undeveloped females. When the males and females emerge from the pupae state both have wings. Unlike the bees, which leave the colonies in swarms because of bad air, overcrowding or other cause, the young ants leave the nest simply for reproductive purposes. Pairing, the males and females take their honeymoon trip in the air, after which the males die and the females uncouple their wings, never more to reclaim them. In this apparently helpless state the females are found by the neuters and either brought back to the original home nest or, surrounded by a colony of neuters, the new queen takes up her abode in a new colony. In this she at once proceeds to deposit her eggs in groups of six or eight. When the eggs are hatched the insects are then in the pupa state. This pupa spins a cocoon, which looks like a little barleycorn, and which most people quickly mistake for an "egg." In about a year this cocoon hatches into the perfect ant, which, suppose for descriptive purposes, to be a "soldier," for such the colony possesses.

This soldier is a neuter with elongated jaws, made for fierce battle work. The colony finds that the work is, becoming too much for the slaves captured on the last raid into the colony of the red ants down the hillside. With their antennae, the soldiers communicate from one to another the intelligence that a foray is to be made. First a few scouts set out, soldiers like. These scouts go a little way, then retrace their steps—why? Because the sense of smell is with the ant its means of following the path taken by its predecessor. This fact has been proven time and time again by crossing the path with the human finger or otherwise interrupting the line of scent, in which case the ants become at fault, and only after scouts have been sent out in all directions by the main body of the army following can the trail be again found and followed.

Following the scouts—in this case, also the old trail of years before—the body of foragers crosses the borders of the slave-takers and soon comes down the hill to the formicarium of the red ants. The black soldiers rush in. A furious battle ensues. Many of the red ants are killed in defense of their home, their lineage and their helpless offspring. But the red ants are no match for the slave-takers. Here and there, in this gallery and in that, the black ants are busy grabbing up the pupae in their jaws. Finally, each invader with a pupa in its mouth, the black ants retrace their steps toward their own colony. The kidnapped pupae are now taken in charge by the nurses and attendants—the "minor" neuters of the black ant colony. The helpless things are fed and cared for till they are perfect insects. By this time probably they have lost all knowledge of their old home, and being thoroughly domiciled as serfs, and knowing nothing better, they are reconciled to serfdom.

As the Romans were so kind to the Sabine women, whom they had kidnapped that these same women risked their lives to prevent battle for their deliverance, so it is likely that these serfs will do anything to make comfortable and easy the indolent lives of their abductors. In truth, the black ants treat their slaves with all kindness, aside from the fact that the latter have the burden of all the work. It is their duty to make new galleries, to attend the queens, or females, of which, unlike the bees, there may be several in the same hill; to feed the larvae and to otherwise keep the colony in the best repair. One of their chief labors is the removal of the larvae from place to place in the nest, which, in fact, seems to be constructed mainly for the protection and growth of these helpless infants. During the night the larvae are placed in the deepest cells of the nest, the entrance to which is secured to keep out marauders. In the morning the diligent neuters take up the larvae in their mouths and convey them to the outer chambers of the formicarium, where sun's rays may have access to them. Sometimes the larvae are exposed to the direct light of the sun.

The serf ants are not the only outsiders brought into the use of these black slave-taking ants. It is well known that ants like sweet things. Sugar attracts them; ripe fruit, a crust of bread dipped in molasses, a piece of candy, will usually be found covered with ants if left for a few minutes on the ground. Also naturalists have discovered that ants have learned to know certain little insects called aphides, or ant-cows, which exude a sugar from their bodies. This ant-cow has a gland filled with the sugar, leading into a duct, which the ant touches with his antenna, whereupon a tiny drop issues forth for the "milker." This operation is repeated till the ant is satisfied. But in this connection one prominent feature has been discovered at the monastery. It has long been a disputed point as to whether the ants will take the aphides into their nests or simply go out to them as the little lice—for such the ant-cows are—climb upon plants. According to the observations made it would seem that so long as the aphides are plentiful about the colony the black ants do not bother to take them prisoners, but simply locate them upon tender plants and go to them for a sip of the honey-nectar. But just as soon as changes in temperature or other causes bring about a dearth of the aphides the black ants thereupon proceed to corner the market in cows—something like the beef trust—and treat those taken prisoners with all care, in order to prolong a supply of drinks. If this observation proves to be a truth it will add one more jot of intelligence to the high credit of the ant, already known as one of the most wonderful creatures of animal life, ranking with some naturalists next to man, and by few placed lower than third in the scale, man and the bees the only creatures above them.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Legend of Gunpowder.

Great honor is paid to St. Barbara in Germany and Italy. Why, very few people, apparently, have up to now been able to discover. A German officer says that she is honored because the invention of powder is, in a large measure, due to her. Berthold Schwarz, a monk, he explains, opened the "Lives of the Saints" on St. Barbara's day, and read the story of her martyrdom, after which he reasoned as follows: "The heart of the virgin was white as salt, the soul of her tormentor was black as coal, and it was sulphur from heaven which punished him for his cruelty. I will mix these three things, and it will be a wonder if I do not discover the philosopher's stone." He did mix them, and as soon as he put the mixture in a fire a tremendous explosion followed. Such, according to the German soldiers, was the origin of gunpowder.—Golden Penny.

Cordite.

It has been shown that the erosive action of cordite was seriously affecting the value of this explosive, and that the British admiralty appointed a committee to make a series of tests and to report upon the subject, and to investigate whether some other explosive could not be substituted for military and naval use. One of the results has been the adoption of a new smokeless powder, to be known as "Cordite M. D." The new explosive is said to have nitro-cellulose as its base, and it is believed to contain a certain percentage of nitro-glycerine, but not so much as is used in cordite itself. It is claimed that it does not generate so much heat as cordite, hence the longer life to a gun.—New York Tribune.

Well Trained Italian Audience.

A political orator addressed a club of Italian voters in English, and, to his surprise and satisfaction, his listeners paid strict attention and applauded at the proper places, shouting "Viva" and "Bravo" repeatedly. At the conclusion of his speech the orator took his seat beside the chairman. He whispered that he was delighted with his reception and had never spoken to a more intelligent audience. "Ha-ha!" replied the chairman; "me fix all a-dat. Me hol' up one a finger, evra man say-a 'Hurrah!' Me hol' up two a finger, evra man say-a 'Viva!' Me hol' up three a finger, evra man say-a 'Bravo!' Me hol' up whole a hand, evra man say-a 'Hi!' like one great yell. Me fix all a-dat."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Pennies in the West.

"They are now using pennies in the Far West," said a traveler, "but they are chary of them. They don't like them much."

"Back in 1890 I got on a Western street car. A woman passenger handed the conductor for her fare five pennies. The man took them, and, without a word, walked out on to the back platform and threw them in the gutter. I was a tenderfoot and the prodigality of the thing impressed me."

"They didn't, you see, give coppers in change because they had none. It is a little better out there now, but pennies are still much scarcer than they are in the East."—Philadelphia Record.

As to Oath-Taking.

In a downtown magistrate's court
the other day a Norseman, in taking the oath, raised his thumb, his forefinger and his middle finger in a regular manner. "We all take the oath like this at home," he explained.
"We put up the thumbs and the two fingers thus as a symbol of the trinity." A spectator remarked with a smile that there certainly seemed to be a great many ways of swearing.
"The Chinese kill a chicken and swear over its entrails," he said.
"Turks swear over a thumb ring. A Siamese lights a perfumed taper and takes the oath with his face bowed forward in the scented smoke. A New Zealander swears with his hands in water. A native African, an Umgalla man, once wanted me to bring in and slay before him a white dove. He said he would have to eat the bird's heart raw in order to take the oath properly."—Philadelphia Record.

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON.

(Special Correspondence.)

Patience Rewarded.—When Representative Gaines of Tennessee first came to congress nine years ago the first bill he introduced was one providing for the construction of a military road to Fort Donaldson, Tenn. In each congress since then he has introduced this bill, and it was not until the present session that he secured its passage. When the bill passed the house Mr. Gaines took it over to the senate and secured its passage there, and it went to the White House.
President Roosevelt referred it to the war department, and there it was looked upon with an unfavorable eye, so much so that it was feared the secretary of war might recommend that it be vetoed. Learning of the attitude of the secretary of war Mr.
Gaines went to Speaker Henderson and explained the situation to him, and the speaker addressed a letter to the president in which he said that aside from believing it to be a meritorious message he was heartily in favor of it personally, for he had left a portion of his jawbone at Fort Donaldson,
"and the roads down there have been so bad that I have never been able to visit it." Before the unfavorable report from the war department reached the president and before Senator Bate of Tennessee could respond to an invitation from the president to call on him in regard to the bill, the president had signed it, and Speaker Henderson will soon be able to visit the place where he left a portion of his jawbone in comfort. Mr. Henderson bears to this day a slight scar from this wound.

Cosmopolitan Washington.—Probably at no time in recent years have the streets of Washington presented so cosmopolitan an appearance as they do now. It has of late become the custom for the foreign ambassadors and ministers and the officers of their staffs to appear in the streets in their native costumes. All of these people seem to be fond of outdoor exercise, and walk and ride a great deal, their bright-colored costumes are now so common as to attract almost no notice.
In addition to the regular foreign representatives, quite a number of native Filipinos appeared in Washington recently. The men and women generally wear wide-brimmed Panama hats with bands of orange-colored ribbon;
some of them also wear bright red sashes about their waists.

Got His Money.—Several years ago, when Senator McComas of Maryland first entered congress, his attention was directed to a claim of $104,000 which the city of Baltimore had against the United States government.
He secured the passage of a bill to pay the claim in the senate, but failed in the house. This year the senator secured its passage in both houses.
The sequel to the story is this: N.
M. Taylor, a citizen of Baltimore, was sitting at breakfast one morning when he noticed in the newspaper a paragraph to the effect that Baltimore was finally to receive the $104,000 it had advanced the government during the civil war. As he munched his biscuits he reread the paragraph and it recalled fond memories to his mind.
Leaving the table he took from his desk a neatly tied package of papers, yellow with age, and went to Washington. Here he laid before the treasury officials a contract with the city of Baltimore by which he was made the city's agent in this claim and under which he was to receive 25 percent if it was ever collected. His credentials were in proper form, although executed some 25 years ago, and he got a warrant for $104,000, and all this happened unknown to Senator Mc-Comas.

An Inventive Senator.—Senator
"Bully" Mason of Illinois has invented a summer belt for fat men which he wore for the first time recently, and which was praised and indorsed by many of his senate colleagues. The particular advantage of this style of belt is that it contains pockets and serves to cover the waistband of the trousers, just as the sashes did that were so much in vogue a few years ago and which were made famous by Speaker Reed, who wore a blue one during the hot summer of 1890 when he had so much trouble counting a quorum in the Fifty-first congress. Mr. Mason's belt was made by himself by cutting the vest of an old dress suit, leaving nothing but the band containing the buckle in the back and the pockets and buttons in the front. When worn with a loose-fitting black alpaca coat, as Mr. Mason's is, the effect is striking, to say the least.

Kissing the King's Hand.—Men in Washington acquainted with the practices of the court of St. James ridicule a story cabled from London that King Edward waived the rule that his hand should be kissed with regard to the Americans who attended Ambasador Choate's dinner in honor of the king and queen. "Foreigners do not kiss the king's hand, even when they are presented at court," said a man who has had much experience in English royal circles. "Kissing the hand is a sign of loyalty and fealty, and is performed only by the king's subjects." When the story was recalled that the sons of Philip H. Armour of Chicago kissed the king's hand when they were presented at court recently, the man quoted remarked that the story must have been untrue.

Rettoc.

A lively fire in the saloon of the Boston, caused damage to the extent of about $5000.

WHEN CHARLES II. WAS CROWNED.

High Jinks Carried on by the People of London.

The civic authorities, in arranging for the king's progress through the city, will no doubt consult precedents, although it cannot be expected to adopt some of the more prominent features of former historical pageants. Charles II., for instance, on the occasion of his coronation, was frequently met, according to contemporary records, with a "noise" of music, the first noise being emitted by a band of eight waits placed on a stage in "Crouched Flyers." The first triumphal arch was in "Laden Hall street," where a woman mounted on a hydra personated rebellion. She wore a crimson robe, had a crown of fire on her head, and a bloody sword in her hand. At East India House a youth in Indian habit, attended by two "Black Moors," knelt before the king's horse, and another youth attired in Indian garb, appeared mounted on a camel, the latter having two panniers filled with jewels, spices and silks, to be scattered among the spectators.

Nymphs clad in white stood at the top of Cornhill conduit, and the naval power of England, which Cromwell had not neglected, was represented by a magnificent arch. On the great conduit in Cheapside fountains gave forth wine and water in representation of temperance, and the lay spectators could partake of either. In Fleet street near Whitefriars, a triumphal arch represented the garden of plenty. At the temple three ladies appeared from behind some drapery, and greeted the king with a song beginning:

Comes not here the king of peace?
At Temple Bar his majesty was entertained with the view of a delightful that Great Britain has promised the "bosage full of several beasts both tame and savage, as also several living figures and music of eight waits." Thus, the king's progress through the city ended as it began, with a noise of music.—London Chronicle.

M. Loubet's Umbrella.

A Paris item in the London Mail reads: "When M. Loubet, last visited his native place, Montellmar, he met an old friend in the street. M. Loubet had a wet umbrella in his hand, and in order that his movements might be freed he placed it against the wall to drip.

Meanwhile a well-dressed Englishman stole up, annexed the umbrella and walked off. But a watchful detective overtook him and escorted him to the police station.

There the Englishman confessed that he wished to add the president's umbrella to his collection. When the president was told of this he good-naturedly ordered the man's release, and made him a present of the coveted umbrella.

Autos Breed Bronchitis.

Dr. Cyrus Edson of New York City has said: "There is not any doubt in my mind that the automobile will prove a blessing to the doctors, for it will create for them a new clientele of wealthy patrons and will make popular and prevalent a disease which has but little vogue at present—that chronic bronchitis.

"Since the racing automobile has become a vogue I have waited for developments. The rushing wind playing in the faces of the automobilists is blowing bronchitis into their systems—

DURING SUMMER MONTHS

Dr. Hartman Gives Free Advice to Suffering Women.

MISS LIZZIE SNEATHING

Dr. Hartman, the Famous Gynecologist and Inventor of Pe-ru-na, Offers to Treat Women Free During the Summer Months.

America is the land of nervous women.
The great majority of nervous women are so because they are suffering from some form of female disease. By far the greatest number of female troubles are caused by catarrh.

Women afflicted with pelvic catarrh despair of recovery. Female trouble is so common, so prevalent, that they accept it as almost inevitable. The greatest obstacle in the way of recovery is that they do not understand that it is catarrh which is the source of their illness. In female complaint, ninety-nine cases out of one hundred are nothing but catarrh. Peru-na cures catarrh wherever located.

The following letter was recently received:

Gentlemen:—"What bread and meat means to the hungry Peru-na means to the sick. It is an especially valuable medicine for sick women. I have found that no medicine so quickly restores health and places the body in a normal condition. I but voice the sentiments of women who were once sick, but now are in perfect health."

MISS LIZZIE SNEATHING.
All women who are in doubt as to what their trouble is should write Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio. Give him a full description of your trouble, previous treatment, symptoms and age. He will promptly reply with full directions for treatment free of charge. This is an opportunity which no ailing woman should miss. Dr. Hartman has become renowned through his success in treating women's diseases. His experience in these matters is vast. Correspondence is strictly confidential. No testimonials published without written con-

to me, for it cured me when I was sick, and the least I can do in return is to acknowledge its value to the public. Since I was 17 years old I have suffered with headache, backache and pains in the shoulder blades. I caught cold easily and my lungs were weak. Catarrh of the lungs was what the doctors called my trouble. I took their medicine for eighteen months without any benefit, and hearing about Peru-na I decided to try it. I used nine bottles and was restored to health. This was two years ago, and I am now in perfect health."

If you do not derive prompt and satis-

RIPANS

I suffered from a difficulty about breathing, a sort of breathlessness which was very distressing. It was always worse on just rising. I thought these spells proceeded from something wrong with the

AGGRESSIVE JOURNALISM.

Aggressive journalism cannot rightly be defined as a mere gleaner of news. A newspaper, to meet the demands of an intelligent public, must prove itself in a large way a leader in all advanced thought and at the same time inform its readers of the more important happenings in the neighborhood. It should be, as a matter of course, a gatherer of news; but then what is news? Surely the publication of a minor fact already known cannot be accounted as news, and its place in the local paper can only serve to fill space and so increase the quantity of what is very properly denominated mere "stuff." For instance, all unimportant "personals" ought in no way to crowd out that editorial or communication which is worth the reading. It isn't important that the newly painted house or the hen with her brood of chickens should make up a paragraph in the country journal. The general intelligence of the community will not be greatly lessened if the newspaper does not announce through its columns that Richard Roe and John Doe and their families have gone to the shore, while John Brown and John Smith with their households have gone to the mountains. Such facts as these are made known on the corners of the streets and in the grocery store days before the village journal gets hold of them. Now while excessive space is given to the news column in many of our suburban journals, it more frequently happens than otherwise, that no real information is afforded the public thereby, while on the other hand the reader is cheated out of much he should have learned through the more substantial writings of the managers of the printed sheet. Editorial weakness and inability will almost invariably attempt to hide behind a pile of so-called news items. And moreover these news items give no individual character to the writer, for he simply states the simple fact, as any other would be likely to state it. There can be no individual impress made by the written line that two times four are eight, or that Richard Roe has gone to the shore, and besides, it is not important that the reader of the country newspaper should be informed of what its editor had for tea although that tea was "garnished by prize strawberries." The live editor is never seen in what is termed a news item, but he will invariably be seen behind his editorial and what is more, if he be a live editor he will have communicated some new thought well worth considering. Do not misunderstand us, for we believe in the legitimate news column, but we do not believe that idle gossip which usually makes up the excess of boasted news, should substantially do away with the editorial pen. Give us, Mr. Editor, something of your own thought provided you have an original thought, and not be over anxious in heaping up what you mistaken for news.

"What the editor thinks or advises" is one of the fundamentals of a live and up-to-date journalism, so that no number of linear inches of news items will release the management and editor of the newspaper from their self-assumed obligations to lead and instruct.

A MODERN NAPOLEON.

The present situation in the coal market gives a hint as to the possibilities which lie in the control of the coal supply. Napoleon had Europe at his feet through military genius and force of arms. The Napoleon to come may well be one whose soldiery shall fight the everlasting hills with pick and drill and shattering blast. The man, or coterie of men who shall have secured control of the production of coal, under the present economic order of things, will have, not merely Europe nor America, but the world, at his beck. What would it avail a Morgan that he had transportation by sea under his thumb; or a Vanderbilt that the railroads were run at his bidding, if there should arise a Napoleon of the mines at whose will that which supplies their vital energies to these industries should be dealt out? All save only those that derive their energy from water power, would be absolutely dependent upon his will. The task of acquiring such supreme control at present would be Herculean in its proportions, beyond the means and perhaps the ability of any individual now alive. He must needs be a man of greater imagination, of quicker perception, and of more abundant magnetism than was even Napoleon, he who would thus subdue the world. But who shall say that such there cannot be?

President Roosevelt at Harvard Wednesday showed himself, as he does on all occasions, a born democrat. His cordial meeting with John the Orangeman was one of the most pleasing incidents of his day in Cambridge. His speeches both at Harvard and in Boston had about them and on them the stamp of a man who never shows the "white feather."

The whole civilized world is praying most fervently "Long live the king." It is to be hoped that Edward VII will survive his present illness and live not only to be crowned but long to reign over his people.

To speak in plain English is not only an accomplishment, but it is a virtue as well.

BELMONT LOCALS.

The following letters are advertised at the Belmont postoffice: M. Louise Howard, Lena McManus, Mrs. Geo. Staples, Mrs. Cornelia Ward, F. Condon, Daniel Desmon, Daniel Hanley, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. F. Mason, Chas. McManus.

Varnum Frost was awarded a first prize for his display of strawberries at the recent exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural society in Boston.

Mrs. Nellie F. McCabe will be installed assistant to Miss Ada Thurston in the new library September 1. Miss Thurston is a graduate of Vassar and has taken the library course at Pratt Institute.

Miss Emma Parker supervisor of drawing in the public schools has resigned. The teachers throughout the town have presented to her three volumes of "Winged Victory" by Emily Dickinson as a testimonial.

Miss Miller has gone to her home in Lewiston Me. for the summer.

Miss Haskins is at Fitchburg for the vacation.

A purse of gold subscribed by members of the 21 classes who have graduated during her work in Belmont was presented to Miss Mary L. Burbank previous to her departure for a trip abroad.

The new streets committee met Thursday evening to consider the matter of grade crossing abolition. It was voted to instruct the selectmen to arrange with the railroad and petition the railroad commissioners to abolish the grade crossings throughout the town.

A public hearing was held in the town hall last Saturday evening in regard to a petition from the Boston Elevated Railroad company to lay tracks on Trapelo road from the B. & M. R. R. tracks to the Waltham line. The sentiment was strongly in favor of granting the petition, although the selectmen have not as yet returned a decision on the matter.

Miss Alice Barrett is home for the summer from Lowell training school.

At a meeting of the St. Joseph's S. & B. Society, held on the above date, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

"Whereas it having been the will of Almighty God to remove from our midst our esteemed brother and member of our organization, J. J. O'Brien.

"While we bow to the will of Almighty God with the full assurance that divine wisdom manifests itself only for the good of all, therefore be it

"Resolved, That it is with deep regret we record the death of one who by his amiable disposition and gentlemanly qualities has endeared himself to all his associates.

"Resolved, That this society has lost a true and faithful member and the town a good citizen.

"Resolved, That while we deeply sympathize with those who are bound to our departed brother by nearest and dearest ties, we share with them the hope of a reunion in that better world, where there are no partings, and bliss ineffable forbids a tear.

"Resolved, That these resolutions be spread on the records of the society and a copy thereof be transmitted to the family of our deceased brother, also to be printed in the Belmont Bulletin and Belmont Enterprise.

LEND-A-HAND IN WAVERLEY.

First Entertainment and Fair Nets the Club About $90.

About four weeks ago a Lend-A-Hand club was formed by 10 young ladies of Waverley for the purpose of aiding and brightening the lives of some of their less fortunate sisters as far as possible. The president of the club is Miss Blanche Benton daughter of Col. and Mrs. E. C. Benton; vice-president, Miss Gladys Sherman; treasurer, Miss Ray Harris; secretary, Miss Stella Banks.

The first annual entertainment and fair of the club were held in Waverley hall Wednesday evening, about 150 parents and friends attending. About $90 was made. The entertainment consisted of piano solos by Miss Ray Harris; piano duets by Miss Ruth Barnes and Miss Inez Smith; readings by Miss Luella Bowden and Miss Elizabeth Harris; chorus singing by the club, and a physical culture drill by members of the club, under the direction of Miss Janette Harris.

The sales tables were well patronized, and the unsold articles were auctioned off by Col. Benton.

ORDINATION.

Rev. G. H. Reed, the new pastor of the Unitarian church, was ordained in King's chapel last week Thursday evening, in company with two other young men, H. W. Foote and A. B. Whitney. Six clergymen participated in the service, Revs. C. G. Ames, E. W. Whitney of Concord, J. P. Forbes of Brookline, H. N. Brown, S. A. Elliot, and F. G. Peabody. The chapel was comfortably filled, the audience including 40 members of the council of the Unitarian churches of this vicinity.

The monks of the Hospital of St. Jean de Dieu, Ghent, in their spare moments have decorated the walls of the hospital with exquisite pictures formed entirely of stamps. In these pictures are forests and streams, palaces and cottages; birds of gorgeous plumage perch on branches, gaily-colored butterflies flit about, snakes and lizards glide, and animals of all kinds figure in the landscapes. The monks have already used no fewer than 10,000,000 stamps in this unique form of art.

TREMONT THEATRE.

Arthur F. Berg In "The Prince Of Pilsen".

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

On account of extensive repairs at the Castle Square theatre, made necessary by reason of the continuous use of this playhouse for over five years, the management will improve the opportunity offered to move its stock company and its productions to Music hall for the balance of the summer season. The Castle Square scale of prices will be retained at Music hall and seats in a corresponding location will be given to subscribers. The first appearance of the Castle Square players at Music hall will be made on Monday, the 30th inst., in a dramatic version of Dumas' great romance, "The Corsican Brothers."

Following "The Corsican Brothers" Monday, June 7, comes a production, at Music hall, of "Lost Paradise" and the distribution of chocolate bonbons will be continued at the Monday matinees.
